Entangled Religions is proud to introduce a new section.

We are pleased to offer our readers and authors the opportunity to contribute papers to our miscellaneous section – for an even broader range of contributions!

News from the scientific workshop, annotated presentation manuscripts, or detailed consideration of latest findings and their presentation (as in our first miscellaneous contribution) – our latest section offers space for a wide range of papers.

And we are happy to let you surprise us.

Send your miscellaneous proposal and we will be happy to consider it!

What do you need to know?

- As always, contributions should be written in fluent academic English. Both British and American spelling are accepted, if used consistently.
- There are no word or page limits.
- Contributions should be prepared in accordance with the details set out in our Manuscript Preparation Checklist.
- Like all contributions submitted to Entangled Religions, papers submitted for consideration as miscellaneous contributions have to be submitted to Entangled Religions exclusively and must not have been published, before.
- Papers submitted for consideration as contributions to the miscellaneous section will be reviewed and assessed by the Editorial Board of Entangled Religions.
- Contributions that have been accepted for publication will be copy edited and typeset by the editorial staff. Authors will receive a proof of their contribution for approval before publication
