

Entangled Religions

Interdisciplinary Journal for the Study of Religious Contact and Transfer

2 (2015)

Editorial 3: g-i

Editorial

2015 — Our First Full Year Online

VIVIAN STROTMANN

Ruhr-Universität Bochum, Käte-Hamburger Kolleg "Dynamics in the History of Religions between Asia and Europe", Germany

© 2015 Ruhr-Universität Bochum
ISSN 2363-6696

Entangled Religions 2 (2015)
<http://dx.doi.org/10.13154/er.v2.2015.g-i>

RUHR
UNIVERSITÄT
BOCHUM

RUB

Editorial

2015 — Our First Full Year Online

VIVIAN STROTMANN

Ruhr-Universität Bochum

Time flies

And before we know it, our first full year online has passed.

Following the launch of Entangled Religions - Interdisciplinary Journal for the Study of Religious Contact and Transfer on 4 November, 2014, we published articles and miscellaneous on topics such as

- religious transfer
- metaschematism
- Paul
- J.G. Hamann
- schematic interaction
- Mircea Eliade
- Moshe Idel
- the history of religion
- magic
- myth
- the sacred and the profane
- the Iron Guard

Additionally, we also brought you book reviews on

- “theological positions of the early Māturīdīya”
- “Buddhist stone sutras in China”
- “Religious Disputations in England”
- “Islamic Sufi Networks in the Western Indian Ocean”
- “Postcolonialism, Religion and Literature”
- “Muslim-Christian Engagement in the Twentieth Century”
- “Orthodox Identities in Western Europe”
- “Muslim Chaplaincy”
- “Issues in Religion and Education”
- “the Bible in the Colonial Discourse of Empire”

But besides new contributors, our website also gained a considerable number of features over the past 12 months - for added functionality and convenience.

We can now offer you an online submission system, reading and citation tools for all of our contributions, an infos & links page to inform you of conferences, and much more.

And there is more to come

Next year, we will have a new section for discussions and rejoinders (topic proposals and manuscripts welcome), handy new features and, of course, new and exciting contributions.

We are looking forward to staying in touch with you — and to your contributions!